This program focuses on grades K-3 with progressive Guided Reading Levels (GRL) A-H.

Rosen Real Readers: STEAM allows students to explore science, technology, engineering, arts, and mathematics (STEAM) concepts in relatable, real-world contexts. A comprehensive program comprised of paired fiction and nonfiction leveled readers, Rosen Real Readers: STEAM provides students with quality, relatable content, while also providing educators with an easy go-to program to bring vital content-area learning into the classroom.

Rosen REAL Readers: STEAM addresses dozens of science topics, allowing for strong correlation to state and national standards by exploring the disciplinary core ideas in physical, earth and space, and life sciences as well as engineering and technology, in a highly accessible format. It expands on the Next Generation Science Standards crosscutting concepts by introducing the arts and how they relate to STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math). Most importantly, they make scientific thinking and knowledge accessible to the youngest learners.

For the exploration of each paired fiction and nonfiction titles, instructors may:

- use one of the titles in a text pair to introduce the concept through whole class instruction and the second title to reinforce learning through small group guided reading instruction;
- promote discussion by having students compare texts and how concepts were explored in each;
- differentiate instruction for advanced learners by allowing independent exploration of the second text;
- differentiate for struggling readers by allowing one-on-one instruction with the second text; and
- apply a cyclical approach to reinforce learning, circling back to previously studied concepts by introducing the second text later on.

The fiction and nonfiction pairs included in this program support science and arts in all domains; their interconnected nature makes for easy implementation into existing curricula as primary or supplemental resources. Many titles can support multiple domains, including technology, math, and the arts, allowing for maximal differentiation and customization.

Bays have land on three sides. The open side is where the bay meets a larger body of water. The opening is called the mouth of the bay.

4

This bay is next to an ocean. Bays can also open into lakes. They can also open into rivers.

GRADES 2-3 (C-H)

The Hopi made special pots to store seeds.
The pots kept mice out of the seeds.

4

The Hopi seed pots had a tiny hole at the top.
One seed was dropped into the pot at a time.

Yuki tried it. It was easy! The full bucket was heavy, but the pulley did most of the work. It was harder to carry the bucket to the garden than it had been to lift it from the bottom of the well.

10

Yuki went back to the well a few more times. She filled the watering can and carried it to the garden. The plants needed a lot of water in order to grow.

Babies cry when they are hurt or sick.
A call to the doctor's office can help.

10

Babies cry for the same reasons people talk.
They tell us about their feelings, wants, and needs.

11

Tides follow a pattern, too.
The levels of the ocean move up and down every day.

6

Scientists learned that the moon makes tides happen.
