Rosen Classroom believes that blending content into the English language arts and the reading block allows students not only to work on the reading, writing, and word study skills, but also provides them the necessary content for their other academic studies.

As emphasized in educational standards, the acquisition of knowledge and skills is strengthened by the application of language skills through a variety of content. Quality content stimulates inquiry, conceptual understanding, content-specific vocabulary, and independent thinking.

We specialize in high quality, high-interest, leveled, standards-aligned content. When these resources are combined with the foundational skills of reading, writing, and word study, this literacy approach increases comprehension of the content and the fluency of the reader.

Teachers can differentiate learning using leveled texts and accompanying resources through a variety of instructional models, including guided reading, work stations or centers, small group instruction, inquiry-based learning, and more.

As students build comprehension and fluency, they are then able to use the process skills of Listening, Discussing, Collaborating, Critical Thinking, Researching, and Presenting to become not just consumers of information, but creators!

Guided reading instruction is an essential component of the literacy block for schools today. In order for guided reading to be successful, teachers must have access to a variety of text from various genres, and at all reading levels to meet the needs of the students they serve. The Rosen Leveled Bookroom not only provides the text students need, but also the resources teachers must have to be successful with guided reading instruction.
