time. People from city-states across the Greek world took part in the Olympics. They were banned by the Romans around 393 CE and did not start up again until 1896.

A LONG PERIOD OF WAR

Beginning in 490 BCE, the Persian Empire tried to take over Greece. In order to win, the Greeks often fought in a tight line called a phalanx in which they used their shields to protect each other. The Greeks won the Persian War in 479 BCE.

Athens and Sparta, the two most powerful city-states in Greece, fought together during the Persian War. However, after the Persian War, Athens became very powerful. War then broke out between Athens and Sparta. The Peloponnesian War started around 431 BCE and lasted almost 30 years. Sparta finally defeated Athens in 404 BCE.

This drawing shows an Athenian leader named Pericles giving a speech at the end of the first year of the Peloponnesian War.
