Hello, Educators!

You give so much to your students, and one of the most important things you give them is the confidence to grow into people who approach the world beyond the classroom with curiosity, kindness, and a love of learning. You work hard to give your students the knowledge and support they need to succeed in school and outside of it. Our goal at KidHaven Publishing is to help you in those efforts with content that empowers readers to see themselves as active participants in the world around them—a world that is full of opportunities to learn.

KidHaven's books encourage young readers to ask questions—whether those questions are about the environment, current events, or their own bodies—and support them in finding the answers in ways that make them feel empowered, excited, and eager to learn more.

At the heart of everything we do at KidHaven is a simple question that often lacks a simple answer: What can I do? The world outside the classroom can sometimes seem intimidating to young people, especially as they learn more about it in all its complexities. However, we strive to provide content that helps elementary readers see all the things they can do to help others, take care of themselves, and explore the world around them safely and with a sense of curiosity and joy.

For example, food allergies are a common part of life for many young people, but dealing with them might seem overwhelming. Kids might not know how to help a friend with a food allergy, or they might not know what they can do to about their own allergy to nuts, dairy, or another food group. But by picking up one of the books in the I'm Allergic to... series, they can find plenty of age-appropriate tips and allergy-friendly recipes to help them approach this issue with empathy, creativity, and knowledge.

Another topic that kids often have questions about is self-care. Why do I have to wear a coat? Why do I have to go to bed? Why do I have to eat vegetables? These questions are answered in a gentle, approachable way in Caring for Your Body—a series that helps young readers understand what they can do to take care of themselves in basic, necessary ways. This series gives readers the tools to better understand their own bodies and develop a strong foundation of self-love, positive body image, and healthy habits.

Readers are also better able to understand their own bodies with the help of a team of superheroes through the Super Senses Assemble! books. These books reflect another common theme in KidHaven content: the belief that reading can spark creativity and engage the imagination. Whether it's through superheroes that teach about the five senses, cartoon animals that describe their plant pals, or aliens learning about where people live, illustrated characters are a big part of KidHaven's content, guiding readers through unique learning experiences.

Today's readers are tomorrow's leaders, and at KidHaven, we are devoted to creating content that supports the development of all the skills, tools, and traits that make great leaders, such as knowledge, empathy, and enthusiasm.

Thank you for all you do to support your students, and thank you for connecting them with KidHaven books that are carefully created to help them think critically, creatively, and confidently about the big, wide world and their place in it.

Sincerely, The KidHaven Editorial Team
