Grades PreK–8

Provide young readers with a fresh look at familiar topics—everything from animals and the environment to being active and engaged citizens to the Thirteen Colonies and Minecraft. Students looking for research resources, information about a topic they love, or a book for pleasure reading will find what they need in the PowerKids collection.

Grades PreK–6

Handpicked for the dual purpose of informing and entertaining children, Windmill's picture books and activity books pique interest, satisfy curiosity, and delight readers of all ages.

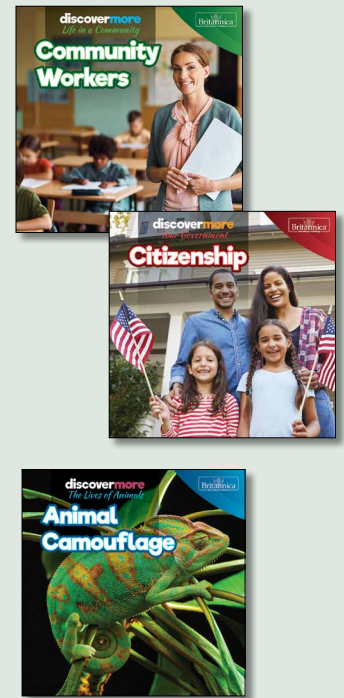

Grades 4–6

Hone scientific inquiry and satisfy curiosity with new hands-on experiment books from The Rosen Publishing Group and Scientific American, the magazine known for reporting on important and exciting research, ideas and knowledge in science, health, technology, the environment, and society since 1845.

Grades 1–5

Encyclopedia Britannica and Rosen Publishing joined editorial forces to create a collection of books on core subjects and events that shape our world. Each subject set is the culmination of the meticulous work of distinguished authors, contributors, and researchers. Accessible, informative narratives provide a wealth of knowledge and are supported by detailed photographs, illustrations, charts, fact boxes, maps, and unique primary source materials.

SPOTLIGHT ON A FAIR AND EQUAL SOCIETY

Essential Question: How can citizens create change by working together with awareness and empathy?

Challenge learners to be agents of change — and give them the tools to do it. Spotlight On a Fair and Equal Society helps learners to understand, internalize, and model skills essential for social justice. These include practicing empathy, active citizenship, decision-making, authentic communication, planning, and problem solving. Learners grow in their personal agency to identify and respond to social justice problems. Students can then use these skills to participate as caring and engaged community members.

- Integrates social and emotional learning (SEL) as a pathway to active citizenship as framed in the C3 State Social Studies Standards
- Builds awareness of identity, diversity, justice, and civic action
- Develops self-awareness, social awareness, relationship building, and responsible decision-making skills

Odd One Out

Learning to recognize and name differences and similarities is an important skill for early learners to develop. This skill is strengthened with the help of vibrant volumes that encourage young readers to find the odd one out in a wide variety of groups and patterns. Simple, short sentences invite readers to look for something that doesn't quite belong among groups of colorful photographs. From finding a dog among a school of fish to spotting different shapes, readers are encouraged to compare and contrast things they might see around them every day.

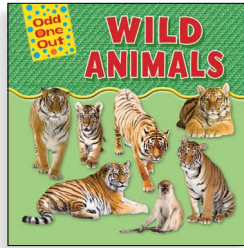

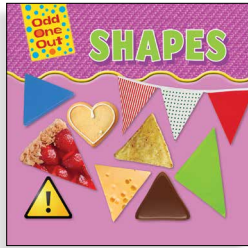

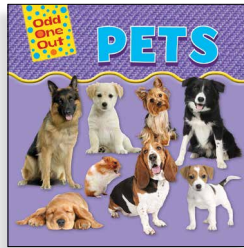

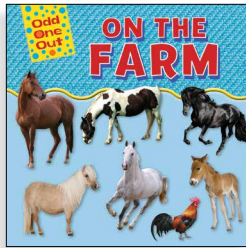

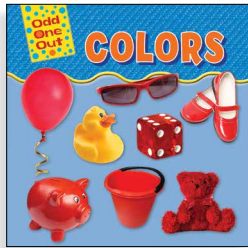

- Wide variety of topics and examples includes many high-interest areas, such as animals and vehicles
- Achievable text is designed to be read independently or out loud with the help of an adult
- Interactive tone helps emphasize that learning essential concepts can be fun

On the Go!

Young readers are often fascinated by the fast-paced, fun world of vehicles, and they get to explore a wide variety of them in these delightful guides to things on the go! From planes in the air to boats on the water and the cars and trains that zoom across the road and the tracks, each vehicle is presented in engaging detail. Fun facts are featured in age-appropriate language, allowing early learners to independently explore each topic. In addition, charming illustrations fill the pages and are sure to delight even reluctant readers.

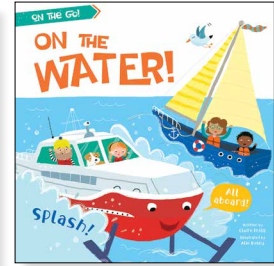

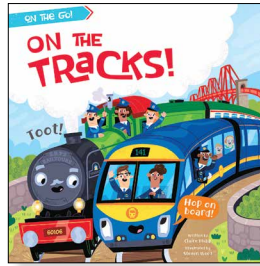

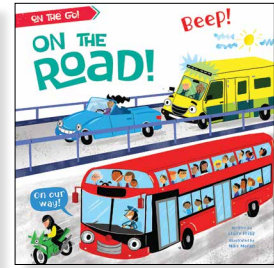

- Clear, concise text appeals to beginning and struggling readers
- Cute illustrated characters make this a memorable reading experience readers will want to return to
- Readers are able to compare and contrast different vehicles and to explore how each one is suited to the conditions and environment it's used in

I Can

Children love to tell others, "I can do it myself!" as they become more self-sufficient. This motivating set provides them with the vocabulary they need as they become independent readers. "I can . . ." sentences offer both structure and cadence throughout each book, and illustrations are closely tied with the carefully constructed text. These features make the acquisition of new words achievable for beginning readers. They'll also discover that some challenging responsibilities and situations are made easier with the help and encouragement of others, an important part of social-emotional development.

- Set promotes emotional and physical well-being through age-appropriate, early reader text
- Colorful illustrations of friendly animal characters are an appealing feature of each volume
- Subjects were carefully chosen for their familiarity and importance in early childhood development and education

NEW FALL 2023!

My Calm-Down Books

Big feelings are normal for kids. They're also a challenge if kids don't have the tools to deal with them. Feelings of frustration, loneliness, or anger can be overwhelming without coping skills. This series provides early readers with ideas for finding their calm through breathing, mindful movement, creativity, rest, and communication. Written in effective, simple language, each book is filled with color photographs to help beginning readers comprehend valuable mindfulness concepts. The books in this series will give kids the tools they need to cope with stress and hard feelings anywhere and anytime.

- Accessible language allows beginning readers to practice reading skills while learning age-appropriate concepts
- This series is a perfect addition to Social and Emotional Learning (SEL) curricula
- Each book is written as a first-person narrative to help young readers personally connect to the subject matter and apply it to their own life

My World

Comprehension of basic concepts, such as colors, numbers, and shapes, is the sturdy foundation upon which students build their education. While crucial to academic success, learning these concepts and the vocabulary that describe our world can—and should—be fun. This motivating series is sure to impress young minds with its vivid photographs and achievable sentences. Each volume encourages readers to recognize and apply what they learn to their own lives, providing reinforcement for each topic.

- At-level text provides support for beginning readers and makes reading and comprehending more challenging words achievable
- Carefully chosen photographs correlate with vocabulary to provide visual clues
- Provides opportunities to practice foundational English Language Arts reading skills, such as reading high-frequency words and gaining fluency

Fun with Shapes

Shapes are a crucial concept for young learners. There's no better way to reinforce this math concept than by encouraging them to see shapes in the world around them. These vibrant, accessible books will motivate and inspire readers to recognize basic shapes, such as triangles, rectangles, and circles, as well as to acquire vocabulary terms and reading fluency through the text. A concluding question in each volume aids in assessing budding mathematicians' understanding.

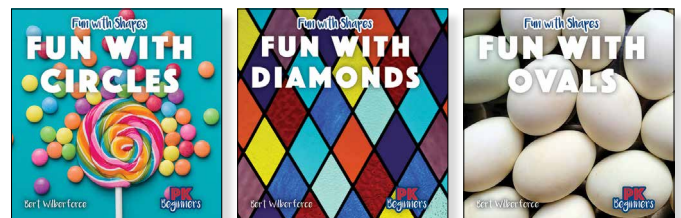

- Emphasized shapes are specially chosen as those featured in many states' early elementary curricula

Wonderful Words

The world is full of wonderful words! Young readers are introduced to many of these words in these delightfully illustrated volumes that are designed to build beginner vocabularies. Each page is filled with charming illustrations with clear labels that allow readers to learn the names of objects, animals, dinosaurs, and more. In addition, short, simple sentences define important terms and give readers even more context for what they're learning. The words are all grouped into basic categories to help make learning easier for beginning readers, and the wide variety of topics appeals to a broad range of readers.

- Questions are included to help readers explore concepts such as numbers and shapes in addition to learning new words
- Text is structured to create an interactive reading experience at home or in the classroom
- Adorable illustrated characters guide readers through each volume to keep them engaged as they learn

World’s Biggest Animals

The animals highlighted in this exciting set all have one thing in common—they are huge! The blue whale might be the biggest animal the planet has ever seen, but all of the featured animals are the largest of their kind. The ostrich is a bird taller than an adult human! The giant weta is an insect bigger than your hand! Readers will be riveted by the images of the world’s largest creatures up close in their natural habitats. The images are paired with manageable text to make these books the ultimate fun learning experience.

- Covers multiple topics essential to the early elementary science curriculum
- High-interest topic is sure to interest even the most reluctant readers
- Each book contains a range map and a graphic organizer to aid reader comprehension

Running Fast

Ostriches can't fly. Instead, ostriches run! When an ostrich is in trouble, it can run over 40 miles (64.4 km) per hour. Ostriches can run long distances without stopping. Just one stride from an ostrich can cover up to 16 feet (4.9 m)!

Breathing Underwater?

Like all amphibians, Chinese giant salamanders need air to survive. Still, this salamander prefers to stay underwater as long as it can! Instead of coming up for air, the Chinese giant salamander can absorb oxygen through its skin. This helps it stay underwater longer.

NEW FALL 2023!

Heroes of Native American History

When European colonizers arrived in what is now the United States, they were often met with resistance from Native Americans. This resistance took place over the course of many years. Throughout, leaders emerged and became heroes to their people. Some, such as Geronimo and Osceola, were renowned as great warriors. Others, such as Tecumseh and Red Jacket, used their words to fight instead of weapons. Historical photographs give young readers a glimpse into the lives of these heroes, and a list of recommended websites and books give a jumping-off point for further independent research.

- Full-color photographs bring the age-appropriate text to life
- A glossary of new words helps young readers expand their vocabulary

I Want to Be a...

“What do you want to be when you grow up?” This is a question people ask most children at some point, and many kids have some big aspirations! The books in this set were crafted to inspire young readers to pursue those aspirations. Other children are less sure how to answer this question, and these books also provide the perfect introductory guides to essential careers in society. Photographs of professionals at work help readers get the most out of their reading experience.

- The text was carefully crafted to help young readers comprehend potentially difficult topics and terms
- The role of community helpers is an essential component of early elementary social studies instruction

Little Citizens

What does it mean to be a good citizen? This valuable series gives young readers the tools they need to put civic virtues into practice. Each book discusses one of the principal tenets of citizenship, including being honest, showing respect, following the rules, and treating others well. Using helpful examples of how to exercise these values in everyday situations, the text fosters democratic ideals at an age-appropriate level. With relevant, real-life examples to guide them, readers will be empowered by the knowledge that even the littlest citizens can contribute to their communities.

- Age-appropriate language makes complex information accessible to young readers
- Colorful pictures bring the information to life
- Addresses topics featured in elementary social studies curricula

A Trip to the Farm

When you think of a farm, you may picture chickens and pigs, or corn and wheat. But some farms have other kinds of plants and animals. Some farms, called orchards, have fruit trees. People at horse farms raise horses! In this set, readers will explore four kinds of farms to see what it's like to work on one and what those farms produce. Vibrant photographs of crops, animals, and farmers are paired with manageable text to ensure a comprehensive learning experience.

- The text was carefully crafted to help young readers comprehend potentially difficult topics and terms
- The role of community helpers is an essential component of early elementary social studies instruction
- Life cycles and agriculture are essential components of the early elementary science curriculum

Natural Resources

Planet Earth is an amazing place. It provides everything humans need to live. Examples are soil, light, water, plants, animals, minerals, and air. These natural resources can be used as food, fuel, or clothing. Some are used as raw materials to make other things.

Apples are a natural resource. They can be enjoyed raw, cooked, or as juice.

Beautiful rock formations are also natural resources. People like to visit them. This can provide income for a community.

Some communities have many natural resources. They may have good land and plenty of water for farming. Other communities may have minerals that can be made into products. The products can be sold to bring in money for the community. Some places have areas of natural beauty where people in the community enjoy spending time. Other places do not have many natural resources. People who live there may need to trade with other communities for food or materials to make things.

Consider This
Suppose you were going to live on a space station. How would you make up for the lack of natural resources?

Rural Communities

You might hear people refer to rural communities as being "out in the country." They are large areas of land with few houses or businesses. They often do not have as many services as cities and suburbs. People may have to travel long distances to the nearest grocery store, doctor, or school.

Farms that raise crops or livestock take up a lot of space. That's why the nearest neighbors might be a few miles away.

There are many reasons people like living in rural communities. Some enjoy the peace and quiet. Others appreciate being close to nature and outdoor activities, such as hunting, fishing, and hiking. Many rural residents appreciate the slower pace of life and the cheaper cost of living. While rural communities are small, they are usually close-knit. People depend on and help out their neighbors. Some rural households aren't connected to services like a community water system. They might get their water from a well and use a septic system for sewage.

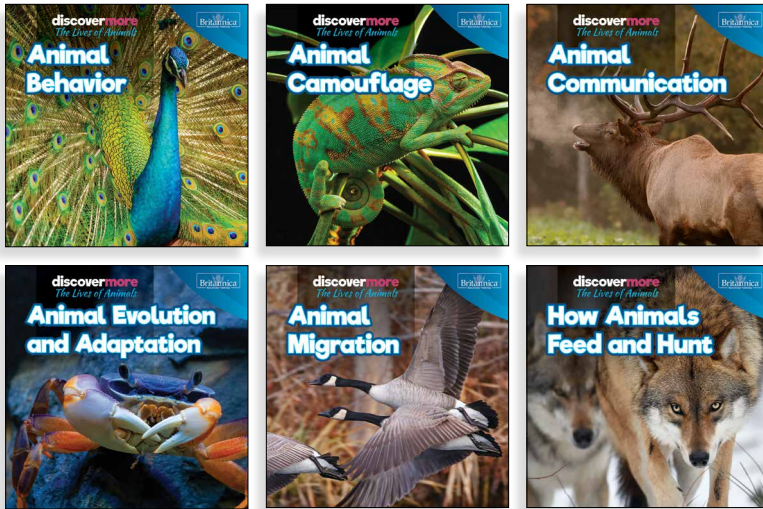

Consider This
Most rural American areas have access to high-speed internet. Think of all the things you do with the internet. What else do you think a rural farmer might use it for?

Rural areas can be great places to see the stars and other celestial objects. There are no bright city lights to cause a distraction.

Observing Animal Behavior

Humans and animals have lived on Earth together for centuries. Our ancestors studied animals to learn how to defend themselves from harm or capture them for food. Today, we continue studying animals to have a better understanding of them.

Most of us see wild animals at the zoo rather than in nature. Scientists study their behaviors in the wild and in laboratories.

They may look different, but humans and chimpanzees share many behaviors!

Similar behaviors are shared between similar species of animals, such as horses and zebras.

Scientists observe two kinds of behavior in animals: instinctive and learned. Instinctive behavior refers to something the animal was born knowing how to do. For example, baby spiders are born knowing how to build a web. Learned behaviors are taught over time. Cheetah cubs aren't born knowing how to hunt. They learn by watching their mother catch prey. These behaviors can change over time as a species adapts to changes in its environment.

WORD WISE
A species is a specific type of animal or plant.

Optical Illusions

Spots and stripes can be found on the fur of some animals to hide their shape. These patterns trick the eyes, so it is hard for other animals to see them. This is called disruptive coloration. Black-and-white-striped zebras are a perfect example of this. When zebras cluster together, lions have a hard time making out the shape of just one zebra. Their eyes only register a collection of stripes.

A zebra's stripes are like a human's fingerprints—no two are exactly the same.

A group of fish swimming together in synchrony is called a school.

Disruptive coloration can also be found underwater. When a predator is near, fish like herring and cod cluster, or gather, together. They face the same way and can change direction at the same time. This helps the fish look like one big animal, which keeps hungry animals away. The predator has a hard time finding only one to eat.

WORD WISE
Synchrony means moving together.

A Proud Citizen

Kids are citizens too! Even though many responsibilities fall on adults, young people can also show their citizenship. They can follow rules, just as adults follow laws. They can respect other students and their teachers, just as adult citizens respect their neighbors and government officials.

Children are also citizens of their community. They can get to know community leaders, such as police officers and librarians. Communicating with leaders is one way children can participate in their community.

You can participate in community activities, such as clubs or volunteer organizations.

By writing to government leaders, you could open their eyes to what's important to you.

How can you prepare for life as a citizen of the United States? You can study the country's history. You can also keep up with current events by reading the newspaper. You can volunteer with groups of people who are different from you. By working together, you can make the United States a better place to live.

WORD WISE
To participate means to take part in an activity.

Three Branches

How could the writers of the Constitution create a strong central government that wouldn't become too powerful? They decided to split the government's power among three branches: the legislative, executive, and judicial branches. Each branch has a different function. Splitting the government's power is called the separation of powers.

The Constitution states that each branch of government has some power over the others. This is known as a system of checks and balances. In the system of checks and balances, the legislative branch makes laws. The executive branch can pass or reject these laws. The judicial branch can say these laws are right or wrong. The branches work together and keep one another from having absolute, or total, power.

The executive branch can either pass or reject (veto) a bill.

compare and contrast
Checks and balances ensures that the three branches of government share power so no one branch gets too powerful. Do you think that this system works well?

The Supreme Court can say if a law follows the Constitution or not.

SINGULAR SIGNATURES

DID YOU KNOW?
The oldest signer of the Declaration was 44 years older than the youngest signer.

The oldest signer was Benjamin Franklin. He was 70 years old when he signed. The youngest person to sign the Declaration of Independence, Edward Rutledge, was only 26 years old. He was a lawyer from South Carolina.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN
EDWARD RUTLEDGE

DID YOU KNOW?
John Hancock's signature is the largest on the Declaration.

Stories say that Hancock bravely and purposely signed his name so King George III would see it first. But these are likely just stories.

John Hancock was a popular politician from Massachusetts. He served as president of the Continental Congress from May 1775 to October 1777. Hancock was the first to sign the Declaration of Independence.

FIRST FLAGS

DID YOU KNOW?
The first (unofficial) flag of the United States had many names. Colors (or Colours). It was sometimes also called the Grand Union flag, the Cambridge flag, the Somerville flag, or the Union flag.

The United States used the Continental Colors from 1775 or 1776 to mid-1777. It had 13 stripes and a small copy of the flag of Great Britain.

PARTS OF A FLAG

CANTON: THE TOP INNER QUARTER OF A FLAG.

FLY: THE LENGTH OF AN EXTENDED FLAG FROM THE HEADER TO THE FLY END.

HEADER (OR HOIST): THE INSIDE EDGE OF A FLAG, USED TO ATTACH THE FLAG TO A FLAGPOLE. IT USUALLY HAS HEAVIER MATERIAL.

FIELD (OR GROUND): THE FLAG FROM THE HEADER TO THE FLY END. THIS DOESN'T INCLUDE THE CANTON, IF THERE IS ONE.

FLY END: THE OUTER, LOOSE EDGE OF A FLAG.

FROG FLAIR

DID YOU KNOW? Frog skin is made to stay wet.

If you've ever picked up a frog, you'll know it feels slimy! That's because there's a thin layer of mucus, a thick liquid, on it. That keeps the frog's skin from drying out. In fact, frogs don't drink water. They absorb it through areas on their bellies and thighs!

DID YOU KNOW? When temperatures drop, wood frogs freeze.

As frogs grow new skin, they get rid of the old outer layer to make sure they stay wet. They do this by ripping off the old skin. Then, they eat it!

Wood frogs have special proteins in their blood that allow it to freeze. This ice pulls water out of the rest of its cells. When the weather warms up, the ice melts. Then wood frogs thaw out and continue on their way!

DINNER'S SERVED!

DID YOU KNOW? Birds don't have teeth.

You may wonder how they eat! Birds have a special stomach part called a gizzard. It has thick, muscular walls that grind the bird's food.

DID YOU KNOW? Owls swallow their prey whole.

Many birds pick up small stones and sand. The gizzard uses this grit to help break down food.

Things that an owl can't digest, or break down, such as bones, teeth, leathers, and fur, collect in the gizzard. Then, the gizzard muscles contract. The owl coughs up the food it can't digest in a pellet, or small object.

Spotlight On a Fair and Equal Society

Our world is filled with people with diverse backgrounds, experiences, and qualities—and every person deserves the same basics of treatment and respect. The guides in this set aim a critical lens at society and encourage readers to listen to marginalized voices and recognize contemporary inequalities. Topics include empathizing with others, working together, embracing identity, and tolerance and acceptance for others. Readers will come to learn that our differences can be positioned as strengths. These books embrace the concept of empowering, rigorous, and innovative learning.

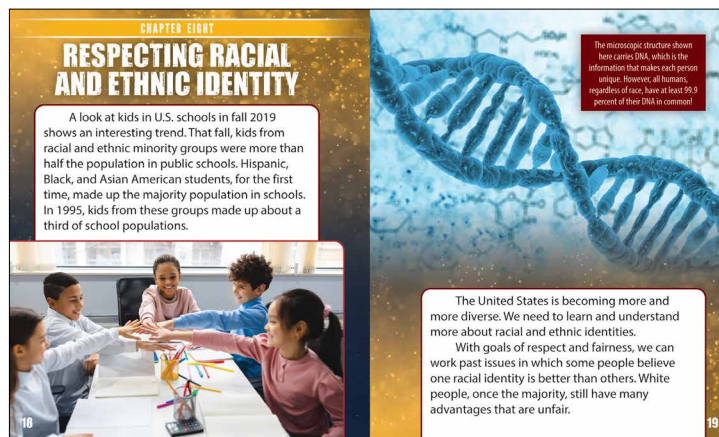

- Crafted with special attention to the Learning for Justice, Social Justice Standards based on their Framework for Anti-bias Education and the NYSED Culturally Responsive-Sustaining Education Framework
- Includes social and emotional learning concepts, based on the Collaborative for Academic, Social, and Emotional Learning (CASEL) SEL framework
- Color photographs, primary sources, and helpful graphics make each book a complete learning experience

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

KIDS TAKE ACTION

How can kids help air quality and the environment? You can become advocates, or supporters, of environmental issues. When people get involved in making change, governments and businesses take notice.

Young people can play a part in creating change too. The news media has taken notice of Swedish teen Greta Thunberg. She is one among many young people who feel that the adults in power aren't doing enough to address environmental issues.

Some young people have started advocacy groups to bring people together. At 16, American student Isra Hirsi helped start the U.S. Youth Climate Strike. Hirsi and other teens have inspired many students to act and support environmental issues. Their group educates young people about the Green New Deal. This is proposed legislation to address climate change.

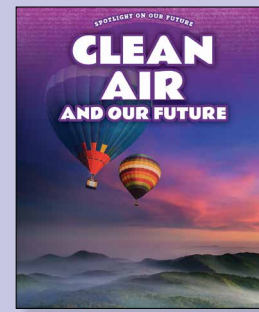

ISRA HIRSI

GRETA THUNBERG

In 2019, Thunberg was named Time magazine's Person of the Year.

CHAPTER TWO

IDENTIFYING CHEMICAL REACTIONS

Not all changes are chemical reactions. Scientists can tell if something is a chemical reaction by looking for certain signs. If the change can't be undone, that's one sign that a chemical reaction has occurred.

Since chemical reactions create new substances, finding a new material is another helpful clue. This material may take the form of a solid, liquid, or gas. Bubbles in a solution might mean that a new gas has been produced. Changes in color and texture can also point to a chemical reaction.

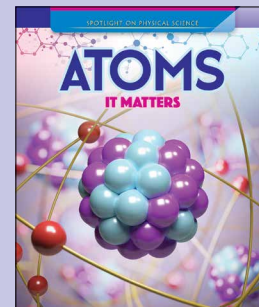

In this chemical reaction, soap and chemicals interact to produce a foamy substance known as elephant's toothpaste. The new material is a sign that a chemical reaction has taken place.

All chemical reactions require energy. If something gives off or takes in energy, that's another clue. Heat, light, sound, and electricity are different forms of energy. A chemical reaction might make a loud bang, cause a burst of fire, or let off a warm glow. These are all signs that energy is involved in the reaction.

CHAPTER EIGHT

GROWTH MINDSET

The idea that mistakes help you learn is part of a growth mindset. Someone with a growth mindset believes that their abilities and skills improve over time through hard work. This is the opposite of someone with a fixed mindset. They believe that their intelligence and abilities stay the same no matter how hard they work. Science supports the idea of the growth mindset. It shows that human brains can change and develop through dedication and effort.

FIXED MINDSET VS. GROWTH MINDSET

Someone with a fixed mindset feels limited by their mistakes. With a growth mindset, you can keep changing, growing, and developing new skills in spite of setbacks.

Having a growth mindset can motivate, or encourage, you to reflect on your life experiences, thoughts, emotions, and decisions. It shows you that mistakes and failures are not the end of the road. Instead, they offer helpful information about your strengths and weaknesses and how to reach your goals. Reflecting also shows how your thoughts and feelings change over time as you learn and grow.

Endangered Animals

The study of endangered animal species is an essential component of the elementary science curriculum, as well as a valuable conservation topic for younger readers to familiarize themselves with. The titles in this series cover the major animal groups and highlight species that are endangered in some way. Readers learn about the ramifications of human actions, such as creating and using fossil fuels, and what each of us can do to lessen the effects of global warming and climate change. Each book includes information on at least one extinct species—including primary source images—to help drive home the urgency of conservation and animal welfare. Readers will also read success stories to demonstrate that people can help save animal species from extinction.

- The text was carefully crafted to help young readers comprehend potentially difficult topics and terms
- The repetition of “A Closer Look at the Categories” (of threatened species) helps readers build upon previous reading and reinforces the scientific concepts behind this set
- Numerous color photographs of animals around the world are sure to draw in even the most reluctant readers

Prizewinning Animals

Raising and showing animals at fairs and other competitions is a tough thing to do. For many young readers, it may be a family pastime. Others might come to the hobby through a community organization or simply their own interest. This informative series introduces the basics of raising chickens, cows, and other livestock from babies to prizewinning show animals. Full-color photographs and accessible text encourage young competitors to follow their dreams of winning the show.

- Engaging text outlines what readers can expect at a typical livestock show
- Content supports themes of care for animals and sustainability practices
- Eye-catching photographs hold the attention of even reluctant readers

My First Facts

When beginning readers open the door to literacy, they're hungry to learn facts for themselves about their favorite fascinating subjects. However, they still need support in the texts they read to be able to decode new vocabulary and concepts. This singular series offers emerging readers not only encouragement through at-level, achievable text but also reinforcement of what they learn through quizzes, questions, and fact boxes. Impressive colorful illustrations of high-interest topics such as dinosaurs, space, animals, and more are perfect for the visual learner, while cartoon images provide a motivating sense of fun to the series.

- Each book provides opportunities for emerging readers to become familiar with textual elements such as fact boxes, labels, and captions
- Readers are encouraged to consider ideas further through thought-provoking questions and entertaining activities
- Volumes support elementary science curricula with appealing content

Slimy Science

Slime is a mesmerizing, diverting toy. Many even know how to make their own. But they likely haven't made slime as fun—and educational—as the slime in this entertaining series. Readers will learn how they can use their knowledge of primary colors to create slime that's just the right hue. They'll discover how adding texture through materials such as glitter can change slime's properties. They'll also learn how to make slime they can actually taste as well as how to create magnetic slime they can bend in wacky ways. Most importantly, they'll learn what slime has to do with science—a lot!

- Accessible step-by-step instructions and accompanying photographs make each volume achievable for visual learners and struggling readers
- Science vocabulary, such as chemicals and reactions, is seamlessly woven into the inviting text
- Each volume's topic is a high-interest way to connect with readers and the elementary science curriculum

Citizen Scientist

When beginning readers open the door to literacy, they're hungry to learn facts for themselves about their world. Citizen scientists are people who take part in and contribute to research scientists are doing around the globe. A lot of what they do is spend time observing and recording what they see. Sometimes that means watching for migrating birds or butterflies or just counting how many of a creature they see in their local park at a certain time. Kids are great citizen scientists! In this unique set, readers learn how to be observant and how to properly record what they see. In addition, each title gives readers age-appropriate ways they can get involved in studying birds, insects, plants, and pollution.

- Includes beginner research concepts
- Encourages conservation and a feeling of civic duty
- Introduces readers to science careers

MIGRATION

Migration is a long journey that some birds make every year. They often live in one place in the winter and another place in the summer.

SURVIVAL

Birds migrate to survive. They migrate to avoid cold weather as well as to find new sources of food and safe places to breed. They return to the same place every year.

ROUTES

Birds follow the same migration routes every year, crossing countries, oceans, and continents. Some species fly nonstop, while others stop to rest.

FLOCKS AND FORMATION

During migration, birds often travel in groups called flocks. This gives them safety in numbers from predators. They sometimes fly together in a V-shape. The bird flying at the front breaks up the wind of all, so they don't lose as much energy for the birds flying behind.

CHANGING SEASONS

Climate change is affecting migration. Unusually warm weather can confuse birds and make them migrate at an earlier date. When they arrive, it may be too early for food to be available, or they'll be hungry.

50,000 miles

(The Arctic tern flies from the Arctic to the Antarctic and back every year.)

A flock of 25 birds flying in a V formation can fly 70% FURTHER than a bird flying alone.

HABITAT HUNTING

Explore your local area and discover the insects and bugs that live in different microhabitats.

Choose three different microhabitats (look back on pages 8–9 for inspiration). They could be a plant, under dead leaves, on an outdoor wall, or inside your home.

Keep a tally of the different species you spot in each microhabitat, and draw a table to present your data. Then use the Microsoft Excel program to present your data as a bar chart.

| Species | Number |
|---------------|--------|
| woodcock | 11 |
| earthworm | 1 |
| ant | 4 |
| beetle | 1 |
| ground beetle | 1 |

First, enter your data for each habitat into a spreadsheet, or draw a table something like this.

Next, select all the cells that contain data and click the "Chart" button. Choose the "Bar" option. This will create a bar chart from your data.

UNDER DEAD LEAVES

GET INVOLVED!

Ask your science teacher to make this a class activity. Together, your class can look at all the data and figure out where each insect is most likely to be found. The more data an experiment has, the more accurate the results will be.

A World in Danger

Scientists agree that people have a lot to do with why Earth's climate is changing. From greenhouse gas emissions to deforestation, our actions are harming the very planet we depend on for life. Some of the main ways the world's climate is changing is that it's getting windier, wetter, hotter, and drier. All of these changes affect wildlife, people's health, and the land of Earth itself. In these important volumes, readers are introduced to the causes and effects of climate change through age-appropriate explanations and examples. The next generation of environmentalists starts here!

- Supports an understanding of conservation and care for Earth
- Includes recent, relevant examples of climate change affecting places around the world
- Introduces key science concepts such as the water cycle and the greenhouse effect

Let's Rock!

People rely on rocks and minerals for many things. From the very core of Earth itself to the tops of the tallest mountains, and from the smallest grains of sand to the biggest boulders, rocks and minerals are the building blocks of our world. This deep-digging set explores minerals, different types of rocks, and the rock cycle with age-appropriate language that makes complex topics easy to understand for young readers.

- Supports the Next Generation Science Standards by introducing readers to concepts such as Earth's systems
- Graphic organizers aid in reader comprehension
- Fact boxes provide readers with interesting additional information

Little Eco Experts

It's never too early to learn about taking care of Earth. This series provides age-appropriate information about the issues facing our planet today—such as pollution, habitat destruction, and declining biodiversity—as well as real-life solutions. Through small acts, such as upcycling materials and buying green, people can make a big difference. This series combines engaging graphics, activities, fact boxes, and text to give the next generation of eco experts all the tools they need to help the environment.

- Graphic organizers and activities present information in an exciting way
- High-interest topic will hook young readers
- Perfect addition to elementary science curricula

Human Body, Animal Bodies

This fact-filled series looks at the features and functions of the human body by itself and in comparison to those of different animals, studying similarities and differences. Manageable text is paired with dazzling layouts and photographs of animals—including people—in their natural habitats. The end of each book looks at sorting the featured creatures into animal groups, using the classification information covered throughout. Budding scientists are sure to get excited when they get their hands on these essential early-elementary life science guides.

- Each book features a multitude of photographs to help readers grasp science concepts
- Readers are presented with questions as they read, and the answers can be found at the end of each book
- Graphic organizers at the end of each book encapsulate and reinforce important concepts

E. COLI & CO.

Plague isn't common, and today it can be treated. However, there are many common types of bacteria that can cause illness. You've probably heard of Escherichia coli—called E. coli. This is a kind of bacteria that lives in the stomach and intestines of humans and other animals.

Like Salmonella, E. coli can cause illness called food poisoning. There are a few kinds of E. coli that can cause very serious illness. They can even cause death.

DEADLY DETAILS

Having food poisoning caused by E. coli isn't fun. It can be pretty awful! But most people will get over it quickly on their own.

The best way to avoid food poisoning from E. coli is to always wash your hands after using the bathroom. Also, make sure to always cook food to the right temperature, or heat level.

HOW TO PUFF

If they're bothered, puffer fish may suddenly become very round, blowing up like a fishy balloon. Their skin and stomach can stretch a lot. The fish will suck air or water into its stomach and puff up. It can swell to several times its original size.

Puffing up like this makes puffer fish very hard for other animals to eat. If they have spines, their spines will stick out too. They make a very uncomfortable mouthful!

DEADLY DETAILS

There are a few kinds of fish that can safely eat puffer fish. Most of them are sharks.

If a predator tries to eat this spiky snack, it might choke!

Fantastic Plants

Some plants are just weird! The Venus flytrap is one of the weirdest, famous for luring in and eating bugs and small animals. However, it isn't the only plant that does this—the pitcher plant's sweet nectar attracts insects to their doom. Readers with an appreciation for the odd will love learning about some strange members of the plant world, including the ruthless banyan tree, the smelly dragon arum, and underwater forests of kelp. Each plant's habitat, unique traits, and prey are included in the main content, which is written with accessible and motivating language.

- Engages readers with a new way of looking at plants and their life cycles while also addressing an important part of the elementary science curriculum
- Graphic elements highlight both common and special plant structures

World of Engineering

Every day, we are surrounded by engineering marvels. But, for some, they're so common it's easy to take them for granted. This series explores some of the most important inventions of the modern era that are used to make our lives easier. From the bridges that connect places divided by water to the cars that carry people over those bridges, young readers will love learning how the things they know really work. Readers will explore our man-made marvels and learn how people used science to make them work. Through step-by-step guides, young readers will even get a chance to make their own marvels!

- Approachable text pairs with important STEM concepts
- Step-by-step guides show readers how to create their own versions of each engineering marvel
- Fact boxes aid in each reader's understanding of the text
- Graphic organizers demonstrate organizational skills and enhance text

FIGHTING FORCES

Bridges work against many different forces. The load is pulled down by gravity, or the force which pulls materials toward Earth. This creates other forces such as tension, or pulling apart, and compression, or pressing together. These forces act on other bridge materials.

Different bridge designs use these forces to their advantage. Gravity moves weight onto supports that carry a bridge's load. Beam bridges use long, horizontal beams and vertical supports called piers. A suspension bridge uses cables connected to tall towers to carry the bridge's load.

TRUSSES ARE OFTEN USED FOR RAILROAD BRIDGES AND MILITARY BRIDGES

ENGINEERING WONDERS

A truss bridge uses framework made from steel to make strong triangle shapes. Framework is the basic form of something. The shapes of a bridge's framework support its horizontal beams.

COMPUTERS EVERYWHERE!

While they don't always look alike, computers are all around us. Some computers are small, such as the ones inside tablets and cellphones. Some giant computers, called supercomputers, are big enough to take up an entire room.

Every year, the technology inside computers improves. Today's computers are much faster than early computers. Even though computers have changed, the way computers are put together is still similar. So how are computers made? Let's find out!

TINY COMPUTERS, SUCH AS THE RASPBERRY PI BELOW, HAVE MANY OF THE SAME PARTS AS LARGER COMPUTERS.

ENGINEERING WONDERS

People who design the parts of a computer are called hardware engineers. These are people who plan and build machines. People who design the programs used on a computer are called software engineers.

Building the World

Discover the world around us from a brand-new perspective with this illustrated series. Inside each unique guide, eye-catching isometric artwork reveals how technology, science, and engineering have revolutionized our world and how they have evolved and improved over time. Each book takes a look forward to envision how engineering and technology will continue to change the world in the future, from how we travel to how we eat, learn, and have fun.

- Text is presented in manageable, bite-sized blocks to aid reader comprehension
- Expertly designed illustrations help draw in young readers while conveying scientific and technical information
- STEM has become an essential component in the elementary curriculum and prepares readers for future learning

Amazing TUNNELS

In the past, tunnels were usually quite short – partly because they had to be dug by hand. Today’s TBMs have made it possible to build some monster tunnels.

Early tunnels
Some of the first tunnels we know about were irrigation tunnels in what is now Iran. Transporting water underground kept it cool in the shade and slowed evaporation. The ancient Greeks and Romans also built tunnels. In about 86 A.D., the Romans built a tunnel between Naples and Pozzuoli in Italy. Known as the Grotto di Sanzonia, the tunnel is 2,526 feet (770 m) long and 29.5 feet (9 m) high.

The longest tunnels
The world’s longest tunnels carry water. The Delaware Aqueduct tunnel in the U.S. is 85 miles (137 km) long. The three longest tunnels that people can travel through are all rail tunnels.

- 1 Gotthard Base Tunnel in the Swiss Alps: 35.5 miles (57.1 km)
- 2 Seishu Tunnel under the Tozono Street in Japan: 33.5 miles (53.9 km)
- 3 Channel Tunnel beneath the English Channel: 31.4 miles (50.6 km)

Each day about 60,000 people travel through the Channel Tunnel.

The Lardal Tunnel
The world’s longest road tunnel is the 15.2-mile (24.5 km) Lardal Tunnel in Norway (below), which opened in 2000. The tunnel is so long that it has:

- three large caves, 3.7 miles (6 km) apart, to give drivers a change of scene, a place to rest, and somewhere to turn a large vehicle around if the tunnel ahead is closed.
- emergency phones every 820 feet (250 m); whenever one is picked up, lights automatically light up all along the tunnel, saying, “Shut up key” or “Turn around and leave.”
- niches every 1,640 feet (500 m) in case of emergencies.
- a special air filtering system that removes dust and harmful gases from exhaust fumes.

Moving people THROUGH THE AIR

On December 10, 1913, the first ever passenger flight took off in Russia. The plane was a Sikorsky Ilya Muromets, with 16 people aboard. Ever since, planes have been carrying people around the world.

In 2017, about 4.1 billion people took commercial flights around the globe, up from 2.456 billion people in 2007.

Jet power
In the 1950s, passenger planes started to use jet engines. These suck air into the front of the engine using a fan. The air is squeezed into a narrow space, mixed with fuel, and set alight. Jets of propelling gas shoot backward, pushing the plane forward.

Controlling the skies
With so many planes in the air, someone has to make sure they do not crash into each other. This is the job of air traffic controllers. They use radar and computers to keep the skies safe.

Early airports
The first airports were just big fields with flat surfaces. Once planes started carrying passengers, though, airports became more luxurious. The wealthy people who could afford to fly did not want to wait for their transportation in a field.

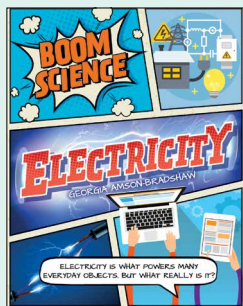

Computer screens
Computer screens control airplanes in the air.

Bring Science Home

Can you cook a pizza using just the power of the sun? Can biodiversity be measured in your backyard? Is there science in art and music? Science can answer so many questions! In this continuing series presented by Scientific American, readers discover the answers to these questions and many more as they explore the science of STEAM, the environment, animals, plants, and even making dessert! Each experiment or activity begins with an explanation of the scientific concept the project will explore. The following step-by-step instructions guide young scientists through the project and help them draw scientific conclusions from their results.

- Materials are often easily gathered from around the home or classroom
- Many projects are marked for use in a science fair and include further experimentation ideas
- STEM concepts tie into middle school science curricula
- A concluding section describes the scientific method in detail

Let's Experiment

Learning through experience is key for true understanding. This clever series features numerous safe, accessible experiments using easy-to-find materials and step-by-step instructions. Colorful illustrated characters, including Professor Albert and Greg the Robot, accompany learners and help clarify important points that readers should comprehend. Each experiment includes difficulty and dirtiness ratings so learners know what to expect as they enter their lab. Disgusting chemistry (slime!), light and color, electricity and magnetism, and optical illusions are the high-interest topics that will motivate budding researchers to unravel the secrets of elementary science.

- Each book begins with an explanation of the scientific method and instructions for staying safe
- Topics were selected for their relevance to the elementary science curriculum and their appeal to the age group
- The design throughout the series is an inviting interweave of interesting fact boxes, illustrated characters, and easy-to-follow directions

SHADOW PUPPETS

Now that you know how a shadow is made, as well as the best conditions to create a clear and well-defined one, try to create fantastic animals by using just your hands.

YOU WILL NEED

- flashlight
- a dark room

HOW TO DO IT

- Choose one of the animals suggested on this or the next page. Now, put your hands in the same position as those in the illustration.

WHAT HAPPENS

By knowing the correct angle at which to hold your hands and the correct distance to keep between the flashlight and the wall, you can create the shapes of lots of different animals. Keep practicing and have fun with your friends!

CONDUCTORS AND INSULATORS

Not all materials allow electric current to pass through them: some materials have high electron mobility, while others don't.

Metals like iron, copper, and aluminum are CONDUCTORS that allow ELECTRIC CURRENT to pass through them.

Other materials, however, such as wood, glass, and plastic do not allow ELECTRIC CURRENT to pass through them. These materials are called INSULATORS.

PURE WATER

DOES WATER CONDUCT ELECTRICITY OR NOT?

Tap water, rainwater, seawater, and river water contain dissolved substances that allow them to become good CONDUCTORS. But be careful! Pure water, also called distilled water, doesn't contain any dissolved substances and therefore doesn't conduct ELECTRIC CURRENT.

IT CONDUCTS!

YOU WILL NEED

- the electric circuit you made previously
- pieces of or objects made of different materials, for example, wood (spoons and plastic (measuring spoons), fabric (or wool yarn), paper, aluminum, iron (nails), rubber, elastic, copper wire
- piece of paper and a pencil

HOW TO DO IT

- Cut one of the electrical wires in half.
- Insert one of the objects you have chosen between the two ends of the cut wire. Make sure the wires are fully touching the object.
- Now try the other materials, one at a time.
- Make a note of which materials light up the bulb.

WHAT HAPPENS

The bulb lights up with some materials, such as aluminum, copper, and iron, because they are good conductors. It does not light up with other materials, such as paper, plastic, or rubber, because they are insulators.

How the Outer Core Affects Life on Earth's Crust

Earth is gradually cooling and in billions of years' time the outer core will become solid. Life on Earth would be impossible for many reasons, one of which is that a cold outer core would mean we would lose our important magnetic field.

The magnetic field helps protect Earth's atmosphere from blasting by solar wind.

Heat escaping from the outer core causes volcanic eruptions, but these actually help make fertile soil to grow our food, and produce gases that we breathe.

The magnetic field bounces dangerous radiation from the sun back into space. Without it, our planet would overheat, and the oceans would disappear.

Without a magnetic field, compasses will all stop working.

Think About This...
Saturn, Jupiter, Neptune, and Uranus have magnetic fields even stronger than ours. What does that tell us about the inner layers of these planets?

BE A GEOLOGIST Make Your Own Compass

You Will Need:

- a magnet
- a needle
- a piece of polystyrene foam
- a large bowl of water
- a pencil and notebook

How to Make a Compass:

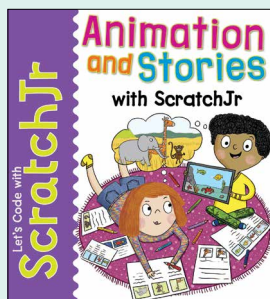

To magnetize your needle, rub the magnet along the needle about 30 times, in the same direction. Carefully place your needle on the foam in the bowl. Observe and record what happens.

The Geology:

A compass needle will point north. Sadly, that has not always been true. Through time, the poles have reversed so that magnetic north was magnetic south! These reversals are recorded in rocks with iron-bearing minerals. The minerals are like tiny magnets floating in the molten rock, and they align to the magnetic field. As the rock becomes solid, the minerals are still locked to that magnetic field.

Try moving the bowl around. Does your needle always point in the same direction? Do you know which direction it points?

Busy duck pond

Create your own duck pond with lots of wildlife moving around in different directions.

- Start a new project, and add the farm background. Tap the paintbrush to edit it.
- Tap on a blue color and then the line tool.
- Draw a pond shape with your finger. Tap the fill tool, then tap the check mark.
- Add a duck character, drag it to the left edge of the pond, and then tap the grid tool. This will help you plan its code.
- Add this code to the duck.
- Change the numbers in the motion blocks, and tap the green flag to test your code.
- Add another duck character. Use the grid to plan the code for it to swim around in another part of the pond.
- Add a different flying bird as a new character.
- Add a butterfly to the stage, and use the grid to plan its movement.
- Add code blocks to the butterfly, then tap the green flag to test it.

Well done!

Outdoor Science Lab: Flower Colors

Aims: To study the different combinations of pigments in flowers. Pigments are chemical colorings. Different flower colors attract birds and insects that pollinate the plants.

You Will Need:

- Variety of flowers
- Peasle and mortar
- Teaspoon
- Nail polish remover
- Tall glass tumbler
- Stapler
- Blotting paper
- Pencils

- Strip the flower petals off each flower. Take the petals of one flower and put them in the mortar with four teaspoons of nail polish remover. Take care not to spill any.
- Using the peasle, grind the petals and nail polish remover together until they form a mush. This may take 10 minutes or more. Pour the liquid into a tall glass tumbler.
- Staple a strip of blotting paper around a pencil. Rest the pencil across the top of the glass so that the blotting paper just dips into the liquid at the bottom of the glass.
- Leave the blotting paper in the glass for about 60 minutes. You will see that the liquid has traveled up the blotting paper. Different pigments in the petals color travel different distances. Repeat the experiment with the other flower petals.

Take a Note

Make a note of where the changes in pigment have reached on each piece of blotting paper. Study the blotting paper strips. Have the strongest colors traveled the greatest distance?

Measure It with Math!

Measuring is an important skill most people learn as they grow. There's so much out there for us to measure—including how warm or cold it is outside, how deep a swimming pool is, how much area a state covers, and more. Readers explore many different kinds of measurements as well as the mathematical formulas behind them. Helpful diagrams and real-world examples allow readers to form a strong understanding of concepts such as time, area, and weight. Readers are presented with simple, hands-on math problems to encourage them to apply what they are learning as they read.

- Real-world examples allow readers to see the importance of math in everyday life
- Diagrams, illustrations, and photographs present concepts in an engaging visual manner
- Both imperial and metric measurements are provided in each book
- Answer key and index help readers navigate each book

3D Areas

Three-dimensional shapes have an area. Planet Earth is round, like an orange. Round objects are called spheres. The part of the sphere that we see is its outer surface area. The surface has an area. It's called the surface area. Earth doesn't seem round when we walk on it. That's because it's so big. We do not notice that Earth is round until we see photographs of it taken from space.

Earth photographed from space.

Square Faces
A cube is a 3D shape with six faces. The faces are all the same size. If we flatten a cube, we can see the six faces. Each face is a square. We can work out the area of each face by multiplying its height by its width. Then we can add all the areas together to find the surface area of the cube.

TRY THIS
Dice are cubes.

SURFACE AREA OF A CUBE
A cube has six identical faces. If the height of a cube is 2 inches, can you find the total surface area? Remember: the area of each face is its height times its width. And there are six faces in the cube.

The answer is on page 32.

Units for Speed

Speed measures how fast something is moving. To figure out an object's speed, we need to know how far it traveled. And we need to know the time it took. Speed is the distance divided by the time.

Speed = distance ÷ time

If a car drives 30 miles in one hour, its speed is 30 miles per hour. Its speed is the distance traveled in an hour.

The space shuttle reached a speed of 1,000 miles per hour just a minute after it took off.

TRY THIS
HOW FAST DOES IT MOVE?
Can you work out the missing speeds? (Answers on page 32.)
Remember:
Speed = distance ÷ time

An airplane flies 500 miles in 1 hour.
How fast has it flown?

A person walks 10 miles in 2 hours.
How many miles per hour is this?

A train travels 350 miles in 1 hour.
What was its speed?

A family car drives 55 miles in 1 hour.
How fast did it go?

Speeds of fast-moving objects like cars and trains are measured in miles per hour. Miles per hour are units of speed. A unit tells us how big a measurement is. We measure the speeds of slow objects in different units. A small crawls along at about 30 inches per hour.

A sloth has a top speed of about 0.15 mile per hour (0.24 km/h).

Math Activities

For some people it can be difficult to get interested in math, but with the help of monkeys, mermaids, magicians, and many more fun characters, this set makes math fun! Each book focuses on one of the main branches of arithmetic and features engaging activities that reinforce key concepts in elementary math curricula. Colorful illustrations help readers visualize math problems while accessible text guides them to complete activities.

- Enriching activities support important elementary math curricula
- Vibrant illustrations and friendly characters keep readers engaged
- Puzzle-like activities promote an interest in and deeper understanding of addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division

You Can Master Math!

Young math students are in for a treat! The volumes in this engaging set are sure to help them master math while playing games. Each page is filled with colorful designs and illustrations to help draw in all readers. Numerous activities and games will keep even the most reluctant students focused on essential elementary math skills. Many of the activities are designed to be enjoyed over and over again, ensuring that readers reinforce math skills, develop problem-solving skills, and of course have fun!

- Each volume includes an opening note to educators with helpful tips for doing math activities with students
- Books end with a quick description of the math skills that each activity reinforces, as well as activity extensions to share with students
- Colorful, whimsical illustrations further help to make math fun for everyone!

Why Do I Have to...

Why do I have to? This a common question asked by young children, and they are invited to find the answers in these helpful guides to growing up and the basic tasks that go along with it. The simple, clear text is paired with colorful illustrations that depict relatable children learning why they have to do things like keeping clean, sharing, and going to sleep. The text informs young readers without talking down to them, giving them answers that make sense to a child. This encourages them to independently satisfy their curiosity and promotes a sense of maturity and responsibility.

- Discussion points promote conversations between adults and children, facilitate classroom dialogue, and promote critical thinking
- Real-world examples foster the development of problem-solving skills
- Language and examples are empowering and build a sense of self-esteem and self-reliance

Lunchtime Pit Stop
When your stomach starts to rumble during the day, your body is telling you that it's time to eat. A busy morning of exercise, learning, and playing will have used up the energy you got from your breakfast. It's time to refuel and stop for lunch!

A healthy lunch doesn't need to be boring! Choosing some colorful fruit and vegetables, your favorite sandwich filling on whole-grain bread, and a glass of milk are all delicious ways to enjoy a healthy lunch.

Safety Online
The internet is a useful tool. It can help you with school projects, you can read about your favorite pop star, or email your best friend. When you are online, you need to stay safe. Here are some top safety tips!

- Never share your password — not even with friends.
- Don't talk to strangers online or accept friend requests from strangers.
- Think carefully about what you post on social network sites.

Never share personal information, such as your name, school, age, or where you live.

Ask an adult to check your privacy settings.

- Always log out of a website on any device when you have finished using it.
- If in doubt, or you don't feel safe, tell an adult you trust!

WRITTEN BY AN ACTUAL YOGI!

Caitie McAneny is a writer, mother, and registered yoga teacher. With training in trauma-informed yoga, her goal is to help people work through their emotions and regulate their nervous system through mindful movement. Caitie has written hundreds of books for young people, but her favorite are about Social and Emotional Learning (SEL) and mental health.

I Can Cope!

Today's world is getting busier and more complicated, even for kids, and rates of childhood anxiety and depression are on the rise. Learning how to take care of oneself is an essential skill for young people. The volumes in this set were specifically written with the mental health of young readers in mind. Readers will learn how to cope with difficult situations and feelings through skills such as mindfulness, meditation, and communication. Each book pairs manageable text with relatable photographs of kids to create a comprehensive guide to maintaining mental health and well-being.

- Fact boxes add information and help with reading comprehension
- Includes social and emotional learning concepts based on the Collaborative for Academic, Social, and Emotional Learning (CASEL) SEL framework
- Potentially difficult topics are presented in language that young readers can understand

How does a virus make you feel?

Different viruses can make you sick in different ways. You might get:

- a headache
- a fever (You may feel warm or have chills.)
- a runny nose
- a cough
- a rash
- a sore throat
- aches and pains (You may feel weak.)
- diarrhea or tummy pain
- or feel sick, or short of breath

The symptoms of coronavirus are:

- a cough
- a fever
- shortness of breath

Having these symptoms doesn't mean you have coronavirus. You might have a cold or the flu.

If you have been near someone with coronavirus, or been somewhere people have coronavirus, then you might have the illness.

Scientists are Virus Warriors!

A virus is a type of germ. You can't see a virus germ because they are SO tiny! But when they get inside your body they can make you sick. Coronavirus, or COVID-19, is a new illness caused by a virus.

A virus can spread from one person to another really easily. In just a few months, coronavirus has spread all around the world!

Germs look a little like this, but WAY smaller!

People are trying to keep away from each other to stop it spreading—but we can't do that forever!

When there is a virus going around, scientists get to work. The best way to keep a virus from spreading is to protect everyone. How? Scientists create a vaccine!

My Life

Every caregiver knows that if there's one thing children have in common, it's questions about the world around them. They are constantly looking at their life and examining it, thinking about it, and comparing it to what they see elsewhere. This set explores topics that are important to children as they grow, from family dynamics to a changing and growing body. Written especially for middle elementary readers, the content is age-appropriate and the language achievable. Friendly illustrations lighten sometimes serious topics for young readers.

- Reflective questions engage readers with the text
- Relatable examples allow children to understand the content better
- Supports social and emotional learning curricula

A Problem Shared

Growing up is hard enough. But it can be made even more difficult by social issues such as bullying, prejudice, and social media pressures. Fortunately, these are problems that many other adolescents can relate to, which means there are resources to help. Finding the confidence to face these challenges can also inspire others. This empowering set will show you how!

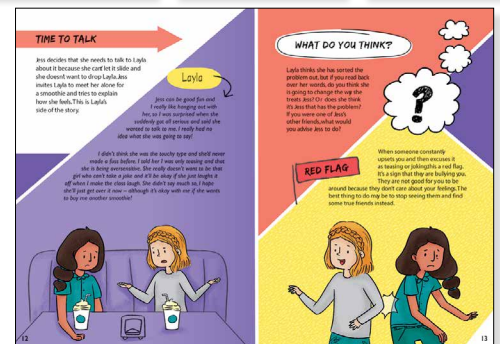

- Carefully crafted explanatory text breaks down each problem
- Engaging illustrations show relatable characters dealing with specific situations
- Descriptions of realistic scenarios involve students encountering the topic of each text
- Questions inspire readers to think critically about how they believe each illustrated character should react
- Tips throughout provide key ideas for taking charge, such as recognizing if someone is a true friend or a bully

TRY THINGS OUT

Use your market research to design a snack product to meet the needs of your customers.

Taste testing

Make up small batches of a range of products containing the most popular ingredients.

- Popcorn and nut bars
- Popcorn and dried fruit bars
- Popcorn-cocoa-apple bars

Popcorn cones

- Paper cones of popcorn, nuts, seeds, and dried fruit in different combinations

Cups of popcorn in natural flavors

- Popcorn flavored with cinnamon, chili, or salt

Offer free tastings at break time. In return, ask people to answer some questions about which product they prefer.

- On a scale of one to five, how would you rate each product?
- Are there any reasons why you would not buy any of the products?
- If not many people like your product, you may have to think of another idea. Better than that: spend money setting up a business that is not going to succeed!

THE RIGHT PRICE

It is important to work out exactly what profit you will make from the things you sell.

Calculate the cost of each ingredient

- Find out where you can buy the best popcorn for the cheapest price.
- Work out exactly how much popcorn is needed for each product.
- Do this for all the ingredients. Add together the cost of all the ingredients in each snack. This will give you the cost of one item.
- Divide the price of each bag of popcorn by the amount in each individual product to give you the cost of the popcorn in the snack.

Calculate the cost of packaging

The popcorn cones are going to be sold in tubs made from recycled plastic. The popcorn cones will be handmade from parchment paper.

- See where you can buy parchment.
- Work out how much paper is needed to make one cone.
- Divide the price of a roll of paper by how much you need for each product. This will give you the cost of the packaging.

Add together the cost of making and packaging one item. This is the unit cost. The difference between the unit cost and the selling price is your profit margin. If you sell each pot at a price people at school can afford, can you make a profit? If not, go back and look at the costs again and adjust them until you can.

MAKING MONEY FROM APPS OR GAMES

Do you have an idea for an app or a game that no one has already invented? It is so simple that you cannot believe that no one has already come up with it? You may have come up with a great business idea!

Research

Before you begin, it makes sense to do some research to see if people might pay for your app idea. Ask these questions of as many people as you can.

- Are there any apps like yours?
- What type of apps do you use?
- Would you pay for the app?
- How much would you pay?

Present how your app would work in a way that others can understand, both on paper or in PhotoCollap.

Build your app or game

Use the internet to learn how to build your app or game. There are many free sites available to take you through the process (see 'Further information' on page 33). Test and debug the app until it works perfectly.

Selling apps

Register on Google Play for Android apps or on Google Chrome websites, or the Apple developer program for Apple Mac and iPhone apps. All of these will take you through the process of uploading your app and charging for it.

Selling games

The harsh reality is that companies are not looking for ideas for games—they are looking for fully developed products. The competition in this area is so fierce that the only way to turn a game idea into reality is to develop it yourself. Developing a game takes dedication and hard work, but if you have a unique idea, anything is possible.

MONEY, MONEY, MONEY

You will need money to start your business and run it until it starts bringing in an income. The money will buy a domain name and pay to set up your website. You may also need to buy a new camera or video camera as well as software to edit videos.

Assets are money or things that you already have that can be sold to raise money.

- Do you have any savings that you could use to start your business?
- Can you earn some money doing odd jobs for family and friends?
- Other assets
- Do you have any old toys, electronic devices, or ready-made clothes that you no longer want? If so, you could sell them—but seek permission first.
- You can sell clothes in good condition on the internet through online auction sites such as eBay.

Other ways to get funding

Gifts

Family and friends may be prepared to give set amounts of money to start your business.

Crowdfunding

This is a way of raising small amounts of money from a lot of people to start a business. Use the internet to research companies such as Kickstarter. You will not be able to get crowdfunding without the help of a mentor (see page 6).

Loans

If family and friends loan you money you must make it clear to them that there are risks. If the business does not work out, you will not be able to pay them back.

EXPENSES AND BUDGETING

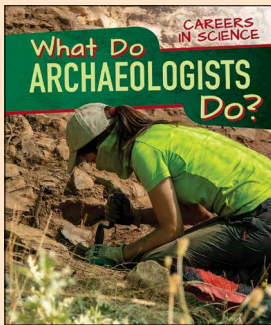

All businesses have expenses, which are costs that arise throughout the course of doing business. To make money, you have to spend money. However, to make money, you also need to keep your expenses low.

Creating a budget for your babysitting business will allow you to keep track of what you're spending your money on. You can break it down by the week or by the month. What do you think you'll spend money on during that period of time? Then, break it down by category, such as snacks or transportation. Your expenses will help you figure out how much money you should charge for your services.

GOOD BUSINESS

You can open up a bank account just for your business. This is where you'll put the money you make from each babysitting job and where you'll keep money to pay for your business expenses.

You can also keep track of your expenses using accounting software. However, these programs usually cost money!

FAMOUS ARCHAEOLOGICAL FINDS

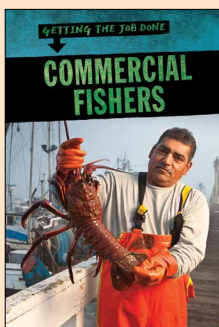

Archaeology came into the spotlight in 1799, when a wall in the Egyptian town of Rosetta was found. The stone was dated March 27 in the year 196 BCE. It featured three different kinds of writing: ancient Greek, demotic script, and hieroglyphics, an ancient Egyptian writing system that used symbols and pictures. Experts from different countries raced to be the first to figure out its meaning.

By 1802, the Greek and demotic sections were translated. No one knew what each hieroglyph meant, however. One scholar, Jean-François Champollion, was able to crack the code in 1822 by identifying certain words in the hieroglyphic section that corresponded with the same words in the Greek and demotic sections. He was soon able to translate the whole hieroglyphic section.

CRACKING THE CODE

At the time, the knowledge of how to read Egyptian hieroglyphic writing had died out. The Rosetta Stone was the key to understanding it. Experts realized that the same message was written in Greek, demotic, and hieroglyphic. Cracking the code of the Rosetta Stone meant that hieroglyphs on Egyptian artifacts could now be read!

Today, you can see part of the Rosetta Stone in the British Museum in London, England.

WHERE DO YOUR FISH STICKS COME FROM?

If you've ever gone fishing at a lake, river, or stream, you know how hard it can be sometimes to catch just one fish. Think about how much time it would take to catch enough to feed your family, all the people who live on your street, or even all the people who live in your city or town!

Have you ever wondered where the fish sticks in your freezer, the fresh fish in your local supermarket, or the lobsters you see swimming in a tank at a restaurant come from? A dirty and dangerous job called commercial fishing helps bring this food to our local grocery stores and restaurants.

A commercial fisherman uses a big net to catch fish from the ocean.

Stand Against

Young readers are still forming their beliefs about the world around them. Their families, friends, teachers, and the media have a great effect on what they will stand for—and against. In this set, readers encounter four important topics: animal cruelty, poverty and hunger, waste and pollution, and prejudice. Each book looks at the many aspects of the topic, such as animal treatment in zoos or ageism, and gives readers information to get a broad, but age-appropriate, perspective on the main topic. Several sections of tips aid readers in taking action—and standing against—the problems they see in their own communities.

- Includes actionable tips young readers can implement immediately
- Asks readers to consider cause and effect relationships

THE 1866 REGIMENTS

In July 1866, Congress put together six segregated regiments in the U.S. Army. They later became four all-Black regiments: the 9th and 10th Cavalries and the 24th and 25th Infantry. These were the first Black professional soldiers in a peacetime army. Some were formerly enslaved people and soldiers who had fought in the Civil War.

There are several stories about how these soldiers became known as buffalo soldiers. One reports that the American Plains Indians who fought the 10th Cavalry gave them this name because of their dark hair and strong way of fighting. The nickname came to be used to describe all Black regiments formed in 1866.

Why Serve?

Black regiments often were given better equipment, or tools and fewer weapons than they needed. They had older, slower horses and poor food. However, the buffalo soldiers had the lowest desertion rate in the U.S. Army. Why? Though paid less than white soldiers, the military wage and living conditions often were better than what was otherwise available to Black men at that time.

BECOMING SOJOURNER

In 1835, Isabella left Matthews and returned to New York City, where she lived until 1843. That year, Isabella became a Methodist and felt called to travel the country speaking out against slavery. She renamed herself Sojourner Truth. This name fit her new life as a traveling preacher who spoke out for truth and justice.

In 1844, Truth joined the Northampton Association for Education and Industry in Florence, Massachusetts. The Northampton Association was a group of people living and working together who believed in equal rights for everyone. It was then that she met famous abolitionists including Frederick Douglass and William Lloyd Garrison. The Northampton Association disbanded, or broke up, in 1846.

An Outstanding Woman

Sojourner Truth was a woman people noticed and remembered. She stood almost 6 feet (1.8 m) tall. She spoke English with a low voice and had a heavy Dutch accent. She often sang and was also known for having a sharp tongue and being very funny.

The spirit calls me East and I must go -- Sojourner Truth

ENSLAVED FROM BIRTH

Frederick Douglass accomplished a great deal in his life. Historians call him an abolitionist, newspaper publisher, writer, and orator. He was all these things but also much more. He traveled the world speaking out to condemn the institution of slavery as well as to demand rights for Black Americans. He supported women's right to vote too. But this man was an unlikely American icon at the beginning of his life. He was born into slavery in Maryland in 1817 and just narrowly escaped, after two failed attempts.

During his lifetime, Frederick Douglass wrote three autobiographies. An autobiography is the account of someone's life written by that person. Because Douglass told his own story, we can learn about his extraordinary life using the best, most reliable source—his own words.

LOOKING BACK

During Frederick Douglass's early life, slavery was ending in other places around the world. Parts of the United States held on to it, particularly in the South, where many enslaved people were forced to work on large farms called plantations.

Unanswered Questions

Many enslaved people didn't know their birthday. Frederick Douglass chose February 14 as his. In his Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass, an American Slave, he said: "I have no accurate knowledge of my age, never having seen any authentic record containing it." He also knew little about his parents. He only saw his mother at night and was separated from her when he was young. His father was unknown, but Douglass said others "whispered that my master was my father."

This photograph of Frederick Douglass was taken around 1879. Douglass was a name he chose for himself. He was born Frederick Augustus Washington Bailey.

Disabilities Can't Stop Us!

People with disabilities are just like everyone else. They work, create, play, and deserve respect and kindness. Many people with disabilities have fought for rights and equal treatment. Today, this fight continues. The biographical volumes in this set focus on how people such as Shaquem Griffin, Helen Keller, and Frida Kahlo have achieved their goals and have fought to be treated equally. These books also help readers understand the preferred language to use when speaking to and about people with disabilities.

- Fact boxes and sidebars provide readers with supplementary information to the main texts
- Essential language helps readers understand respectful ways to refer to disability issues

GEARING UP

It takes climbers up to three months to summit Mount Everest, so they need a lot of gear and supplies. From a climbing harness and a belay device to an ice axe, much of it is specialized. Climbers should have experience with this gear before they attempt to summit Mount Everest. Here's a list of some of the other important supplies.

- two down sleeping bags (one for -40°F (-40°C) and the other for -20°F (-29°C)
- trekking, or walking, poles
- ski goggles
- compass or GPS unit

Each climber also needs socks, gloves, boots, and jackets of varying thicknesses. Expedition companies often supply or rent out some gear, including clothing, rescue and medical gear, tents, and oxygen.

SIEGE CLIMBING

Most expeditions practice something called siege climbing. In this system, climbers establish camps at increasingly higher altitudes for big groups to travel between. In the 1970s, many climbers returned to an earlier style of climbing known as "Alpinism." With this style, only three or four climbers ascended together as quickly as possible, carrying all their gear with them.

CLIMBERS MUST BRING A LOT MORE EQUIPMENT THAN THEY CAN CARRY ON THEIR BACKS. MUCH OF THE GEAR IS SENT AHEAD TO CAMP BY EXPEDITION COMPANIES.

MEASURING A TORNADO

It's terribly dangerous for people to get close enough to a tornado to measure its wind speed and strength. Instead, weather officials classify tornadoes according to how much damage they've done using the Enhanced Fujita (EF) Scale.

The EF Scale has six ratings: EF0 through EF5. The higher the EF number, the more damaging the tornado is. After a tornado has passed, scientists examine the damage it did to more than two dozen types of buildings and trees. They use this information to estimate the tornado's wind speed and EF rating. Only scientists at the National Weather Service can determine a tornado's rating. They study the damage the tornado did to several buildings before making their ruling.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

The Enhanced Fujita Scale—and the older Fujita Scale—were named after Dr. Toruuya "Tor" Fujita. He designed the original scale in 1971 while working at the University of Chicago. The original Fujita Scale was replaced because many believed it overestimated wind speeds. The Japanese-born meteorologist also discovered macrobursts and microbursts, types of strong winds.

20

OPERATIONAL EF SCALE

| EF NUMBER | 3-SECOND GUST (MPH) |
|-----------|-------------------------|
| 0 | 65–85 (104.6m–136m) |
| 1 | 86–110 (138.4m–177m) |
| 2 | 111–135 (178.6m–217.3m) |
| 3 | 136–165 (218.9m–265.5m) |
| 4 | 166–200 (257.2m–321.3m) |
| 5 | Over 200 (over 321.9m) |

AN EF2 OR EF3 TORNADO CAN RIP APART A HOUSE IN FOUR SECONDS.

Positions on the Team

Watching sports is more fun when you understand the game, and learning as much as you can about a sport can make you better at playing it. With this in mind, young athletes and sports fans are sure to enjoy this exciting look at a variety of sports at the positional level. What does a quarterback do? How does a point guard run the offense in basketball? What's a shortstop? The answers to these questions and many more are presented through detailed main text, sidebars, and fact boxes. In addition, readers can find full-color photographs of athletes in action.

- Essential terminology is defined in text and in a useful glossary to help readers talk the talk about the sports they love
- Text is written with athletes of all genders in mind, and examples of both male and female players at different positions are included
- High-interest topic appeals to reluctant readers

Ava's Spectacular Spectacles

Ava doesn't like to wear her glasses in school because she's self-conscious about them. Then her teacher shows her a book of reimagined fairy tales and nursery rhymes. All the characters have glasses! If only Little Bo-Peep had her glasses, she wouldn't have lost her sheep. If only the Ugly Duckling had glasses, she would have seen her own beauty. This book about embracing one's differences is sure to speak to young readers who have their own insecurities.

David and Goliath

This book tells the popular Bible story of David and Goliath in a relatable way. When a young shepherd named David brings his brothers food at their Israelite army camp, he finds the soldiers in a panic. The opposing side has a giant with them who wishes to fight one of the Israelites for victory. Though he is small, David insists on fighting the giant himself. This classic underdog story imparts messages of determination and recognizing one's own strength.

The Moon Is My Friend

In this book, a young girl imagines that the moon is her friend as it goes through its ever-changing phases. As a waxing crescent, the moon seems like it's playing peek-a-boo. As a waning gibbous, it looks like a bag of candies and cookies. Readers will learn the phases of the moon through this wonderfully imaginative story in rhyme. This book is sure to spark curiosity and wonder in young readers and encourage them to think critically about shapes and changes in nature.

That Morning

Mangrufo and Leuklaya don’t feel like themselves. Mangrufo can’t enjoy playing with toys or reading, like he usually does. Neither can Leuklaya. They hurt each other the day before, and both feel ashamed and lonely. However, neither one of them knows what to do with their feelings. It’s not until they come together once again that all feels right with the world. This book boasts a subtle monster theme within a real-world, relatable situation. Through powerful language and fantastical illustrations, That Morning is a guidebook through the difficult feelings of conflict and the power of forgiveness.

Three Silly Chickens

Who is the most beautiful chicken of them all? Nora, Dora, and Flora spend their time squabbling over this question, bringing chaos to the henhouse. The other chickens think the vain chickens should ask the farmer—who might even make them dinner. When a wise old goat offers the three silly chickens three wishes, they have a chance to redeem themselves. But can they decide who should get the three wishes, or will their competitive attitudes get in the way? This funny picture book set on a farm offers a lesson about important values, with a hint of magic.

Reggie Red

Reggie hears other girls in her class talk about dyeing their hair and wearing makeup for their class picture. This makes her feel bad about her own appearance, with her big, red mane and freckles. But try as she might, Reggie can't seem to cover up her hair or freckles. Her mom passes down some family wisdom about inner beauty, which helps not only Reggie feel better, but also helps another girl feel better too. This book about self-love and inner beauty will speak to young readers who might feel self-conscious as they compare themselves to peers.

An Unofficial Minecraft® Graphic Novel

If you could venture into the world of your favorite video game, would you? In these full-color graphic novels, siblings Maria and Mike find a way to step—or more accurately, tumble—into the world of Minecraft. They'll have to use all their skills, resourcefulness, and teamwork to make it home and then make the world their own. In set two of their adventures, they're joined by their friends Kiera, Adam, and Rose for continued exploration and challenges in new settings and situations, showing young readers the value of problem solving and teamwork not only in the game but beyond.

- Authentic Minecraft settings and scenarios will interest gaming fans
- Diverse and humorous characters keep readers turning pages
- Original artwork will underline storylines and engage students

Gingerbread Men Treats

This fun recipe combines cupcakes topped with frosting and these cute Christmas favorites—gingerbread men! You can buy ready-made mini gingerbread cookies or bake your own by following the recipe on pages 18 to 21. If you bake the gingerbread house from pages 18 to 21, you can turn the leftover dough trimmings into gingerbread men decorations for your cupcakes.

Ingredients

- To make the cupcake batter:
 - 1/2 cup butter or margarine
 - 1/2 cup white sugar
 - 2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
 - 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- For the decorations and frosting:
 - 1/2 cup cream-colored icing
 - 1 large egg
 - 1/2 teaspoon milk
 - Green food coloring
 - 1/2 cup choice of green sprinkles
 - 1/2 cup green marzipan

Equipment

- 12-hole muffin pan
- 12 muffin cups
- Mixing bowl
- Wooden spoon
- Electric mixer (optional)
- Oven mitt
- Multitool
- Metal sifter
- Small bowl
- Spoon
- Frosting gun

Steps:

- Preheat the oven to 350°F (180°C).
- Use the muffin pan with muffin cups.
- Put the filling in a mixing bowl and whisk together until it can stir on an electric mixer.
- Add the flour, baking powder, salt, eggs, milk, and vanilla extract to the bowl. Use a wooden spoon or electric mixer to beat the ingredients together until the mixture is thick and smooth.

Handprint Wreath

Hang this wreath on a door to brighten up your home at Christmas. It's really easy to make. Decorate it with more holly and berries if you like a bit more color.

You will need...

- card stock in red, white, and one color of green
- scissors
- glue
- Pin glue
- holly leaves
- lime
- piece of string

Steps:

- Put a plate on the white card stock. Draw around it. Repeat with a colored smaller plate to create a donut shape.
- Cut out the large circle. Then cut out the inner circle to make the donut shape.
- Trace a piece of string to the back of the wreath.
- Draw around your hand. Cut it out. Then cut around that template to make 10 hands in each shade of green, 20 in all.
- Draw some small circles, around 1/2 inch in diameter, on the red card stock. Cut them out.
- Stick your holly and berries onto the wreath.

WE CAN DRAW AIRPLANES

Introduced in the 1970s, the Concorde jet was one of the fastest airplanes ever built. It was a supersonic aircraft, or an aircraft that can fly faster than the speed of sound. It could travel up to 1354 miles (2179 km) per hour. The Concorde flew across the Atlantic Ocean from New York to London, England, in 3 hours instead of the 8 hours it took other planes! The nose of the Concorde was lowered during the landing to give the pilot a better view of the landing strip. The 84-foot (25.6 m) wings had engines and fuel tanks. The Concorde started flying passengers in 1976 and was used until 2003.

Steps:

- To start, draw an oval on a sheet of paper to form the body of the jet.
- Draw curved lines on the oval to make the wings.
- To create the top of the airplane, make the end of the oval at the top come to a point. Inside and below the oval, draw a line to show where the wings are. Draw four boxes. These boxes will hold the engines of the turbojet engines.
- Draw three trapezoid shapes on top of the engine boxes.
- Draw three curved lines on top of the wings for the tail. Draw the tail fin, the vertical fin, the horizontal fin, and the horizontal fin. These are the wings of the turbojet engines.

Let's Joke Around!

Animals can be very funny sometimes, and they make very fun subjects for jokes! These delightful joke books focus on familiar creatures—from fish and snakes to dogs and horses—and present a number of hilarious jokes to tell to friends and family about them. In addition, readers discover cool facts about these animals, their habitats, and their habits. This unique blending of life science and comedy creates a reading experience unlike any other. In addition, full-color photographs of each animal are presented in impressive detail.

- Each volume ends with a series of fascinating facts to supplement science curricula, making this reading experience educational in addition to entertaining
- Wide variety of subjects includes insects, pets, and popular wild animals to appeal to readers with different interests
- Age-appropriate jokes are presented in an eye-catching design

NEW FALL 2023!

Mis libros de calma (My Calm-Down Books)

Big feelings are normal for kids. They're also a challenge if kids don't have the tools to deal with them. Feelings of frustration, loneliness, or anger can be overwhelming without coping skills. This series provides early readers with ideas for finding their calm through breathing, mindful movement, creativity, rest, and communication. Written in effective, simple language, each book is filled with color photographs to help beginning readers comprehend valuable mindfulness concepts. The books in this series will give kids the tools they need to cope with stress and hard feelings anywhere and anytime.

- Accessible language allows beginning readers to practice reading skills while learning age-appropriate concepts
- This series is a perfect addition to Social and Emotional Learning (SEL) curricula
- Each book is written as a first-person narrative to help young readers personally connect to the subject matter and apply it to their own life

Mis primeros cuentos clásicos (My First Classic Tales)

The stories have been told for centuries, but the iconic fairy tales retold here are brought to life in a new way with beautiful, modern illustrations that capture the heart and charm of these beloved characters. From Little Red Riding Hood and the wolf to Goldilocks and the family of bears, young readers discover or perhaps rediscover a wonderful cast of fairy-tale characters and stories. With detailed illustrations and age-appropriate text broken into manageable sections, readers are fully immersed within the retellings of these formative and entertaining stories.

- The text is designed for a variety of reading situations—from independent reading to story time in the classroom to bedtime stories at home
- Readers discover the original stories behind some of their favorite animated movies, including Peter Pan and Pinocchio
- Each story offers a valuable lesson for young readers, which are often tied to social-emotional learning concepts

SEL connections:

- Curiosity and open-mindedness
- Critical thinking
- Recognizing one's strengths

NEW FALL 2023!

Los animales más grandes del mundo (World's Biggest Animals)

The animals highlighted in this exciting set all have one thing in common—they are huge! The blue whale might be the biggest animal the planet has ever seen, but all of the featured animals are the largest of their kind. The ostrich is a bird taller than an adult human! The giant weta is an insect bigger than your hand! Readers will be riveted by the images of the world's largest creatures up close in their natural habitats. The images are paired with manageable text to make these books the ultimate fun learning experience.

- Covers multiple topics essential to the early elementary science curriculum
- High-interest topic is sure to interest even the most reluctant readers
- Each book contains a range map and a graphic organizer to aid reader comprehension

Corriendo rápido

El avestruz no puede volar. ¡Mejor, el avestruz corre! Cuando un avestruz está en problemas, puede correr más de 64,4 kilómetros (40 millas) por hora. Un avestruz puede correr una distancia larga sin parar. ¡Solo una zancada de un avestruz puede cubrir una distancia de 4,9 metros (16 pies)!

Comer con filtro

El tiburón ballena no muerde su comida como otros tiburones. Mejor, ellos comen con filtro. Esto significa que los tiburones ballena abren sus bocas gigantes y toman agua llena de animales pequeños. Entonces, atrapan su comida usando partes especiales de su cuerpo y dejan salir el agua.

Mi mundo (My World)

Comprehension of basic concepts, such as colors, numbers, and shapes, is the sturdy foundation upon which students build their education. While crucial to academic success, learning these concepts and the vocabulary that describe our world can—and should—be fun. This motivating series is sure to impress young minds with its vivid photographs and achievable sentences. Each volume encourages readers to recognize and apply what they learn to their own lives, providing reinforcement for each topic.

- At-level text provides support for beginning readers and makes reading and comprehending more challenging words achievable
- Carefully chosen photographs correlate with vocabulary to provide visual clues
- Provides opportunities to practice foundational English Language Arts reading skills, such as reading high-frequency words and gaining fluency

¿Qué podemos aprender de las rocas? (Let's Rock!)

People rely on rocks and minerals for many things. From the very core of Earth itself to the tops of the tallest mountains, and from the smallest grains of sand to the biggest boulders, rocks and minerals are the building blocks of our world. This deep-digging set explores minerals, different types of rocks, and the rock cycle with age-appropriate language that makes complex topics easy to understand for young readers.

- Supports the Next Generation Science Standards by introducing readers to concepts such as Earth's systems

Mi mundo / My World

Comprehension of basic concepts, such as colors, numbers, and shapes, is the sturdy foundation upon which students build their education. While crucial to academic success, learning these concepts and the vocabulary that describe our world can—and should—be fun. This motivating series is sure to impress young minds with its vivid photographs and achievable sentences. Each volume encourages readers to recognize and apply what they learn to their own lives, providing reinforcement for each topic.

- At-level text provides support for beginning readers and makes reading and comprehending more challenging words achievable
- Carefully chosen photographs correlate with vocabulary to provide visual clues
- Provides opportunities to practice foundational English Language Arts reading skills, such as reading high-frequency words and gaining fluency

Pequeños expertos en ecología / Little Eco Experts

It's never too early to learn about taking care of Earth. This series provides age-appropriate information about the issues facing our planet today—such as pollution, habitat destruction, and declining biodiversity—as well as real-life solutions. Through small acts, such as upcycling materials and buying green, people can make a big difference. This series combines engaging graphics, activities, fact boxes, and text to give the next generation of eco experts all the tools they need to help the environment.

- Graphic organizers and activities present information in an exciting way
- High-interest topic will hook young readers
- Perfect addition to elementary science curricula
